

Key Findings:

While casual riders overall show higher round-trip leisure usage, over 92% of all casual trips are one-way (point-to-point)—accounting for over 1.25 million rides annually. This proves that a substantial segment of casual riders relies on Cyclistic for functional, weekday commuting, making them ideal candidates for targeted conversion to annual memberships through introductory commuter trial rates.

Total number of rides of annual members and casual riders

Percentage(%) of round trips for annual members and casual riders

Hourly Weekday Trip Distribution (Commute Peak Spikes)

